Members,

June is just around the corner and now it feels like Summer again. Car show and cruise season has definitely shifted into gear and is accelerating. Seems like there is a car show or cruise-in every evening in Michigan somewhere. The question isn't if there is a car show, but where is the car show! This is a great opportunity to share your love for Corvettes with the community. Don't forget to wear or display something signifying your membership with the club, every Corvette owner is a potential member! Be prepared to talk us up and all the fun we have. Don't forget to tell them about our website and Facebook page if you don't have any pamphlets to hand them so they can find us later.

Convention is in a few weeks. This will be my first and I am excited to find out what it is all about. Upon returning, we will be preparing to host our first Sanctioned event of the year with Blessing of the Corvettes car show and a Rallye following. The success of these events relies on club members helping to put them on. If you can, please volunteer to work as many events as you can to support the organizers. While we have sign-up sheets at the meetings to get known needs covered, it never hurts the day of an event to ask the organizer "Do you need help with anything else?". The more people that pitch in, the less work each person has to do and the more time everyone gets to enjoy the event.

I will continue my message of hope for this year. Recently the Governor announced plans to phase all of the Covid protocols out. This will mean our venues that have forced cancellations in the past will no longer be constrained from hosting groups! Even with protocols in place, I have seen a resounding common theme at the events held so far this year - People want to get out and do things. Even when the weather isn't perfect or they know it will be a small event, people are showing up and they are excited!

Save the Wave!

Check Out the Chevrolet Corvette Stingray Pace Car for the 105th Indianapolis 500

For the 18th time in race history, Chevrolet Corvette will serve as the pace car for the Indianapolis 500.

© Joe Skibinski/IMS Arctic White Stingray will be the first convertible since 2008 to pace Indy 500.

This time, it's the 2021 mid-engine Chevrolet Corvette Stingray hardtop convertible that will lead the 33-car field for the 105th Running of the Indianapolis 500 presented by Gainbridge on May 30.

The Arctic White Stingray will be the first convertible since 2008 to pace the 500.

Chevrolet and Corvette have led the starting field more than any other manufacturer and nameplate, respectively. The 2021 race marks the 32nd time for Chevrolet to pace the 500 dating back to 1948, and the 18th time since 1978.

© Chris Owens/IMS 2021 Mid Engine Chevrolet Corvette

"The Chevrolet team is privileged every time we're invited to pace the Indianapolis 500," said Steve Majoros, vice president of Chevrolet Marketing. "We are confident the track-capable Corvette Stingray Convertible will catch every race fan's eye as it leads the pack toward the Yard of Bricks. From the color scheme, to the special race weekend decals and how the safety lighting is skillfully integrated into the nacelles of the hard-top convertible Corvette's revolutionary appearance, we're putting Chevrolet's best on display for the fans."

The car will feature sky cool gray and strike yellow upholstery. The car includes an exclusive stripe package and unique Stingray decals. The Corvette also strobe lights in the headlights, front louvers and taillights. This makes the car even more visible during its pace-car duties.

"The 2021 Corvette Stingray hardtop convertible is such a world-class performance car that's a perfect match to lead the talented field of 33 drivers to the green flag in 'The Greatest Spectacle in Racing,'" Indianapolis Motor Speedway president J. Douglas Boles said. "We continue to be grateful for our strong, enduring partnership with Chevrolet and its many contributions to the success of our events and the exciting appeal of competition at the Racing Capital of the World."

Based on current GM schedules the 2021 Corvette Production will end September 3rd, and production of the 2022 models to begin on September 7th.
