Members,

July always has a busy NCCC event schedule. Our Region started the month out with the Multi-Region Bracket Autocross, we had our 2 day autocross, Corvette Envy, People's Choice car show hosted by Irish Hills, and then closed it out on the 31st with an Autocross hosted by CCM. The only thing left out of that group is another rallye, and the Flint Club has one scheduled for the next event. I hope this means everyone had a chance to get out and enjoy their Corvette their favorite way.

I know in previous letters I have encouraged everyone to get out and participate in Regional events, and mention meeting new people. This past month was particularly interesting while attending regional events. I had the opportunity to meet some "Corvette Celebrities". For those of you who follow Corvettes you will know the name Lingenfelter and most who looked up the news on C8s will know Rick Conti. Rick joined us for a day of autocrossing in Perrysburg, even donating lunch, and used the event to put up content to his YouTube Channel. You can find him by just searching for "Rick Conti" and his channel has all kinds of Corvette news, tech, and fun. At the end of the month, Kristen and Ken Lingenfelter joined us at the autocross in Livonia where Kristen did her first autocross. Most of you probably know the history of the Lingenfelter name and its association with GM performance, but if not there is some good history to read up on.

So again I will say, it is worth it to come out to these regional events. There is always a lot of fun to be had and new people to meet.

Remember to Wave!

Just Horsing Around

Car lovers and Corvette enthusiasts have a fascination with horsepower. The more the merrier! It is the source of lengthy discussions, debates and comparisons. But what breed of horse was used to invent this unit of measure? Clydesdale? Shetland pony? As the automobile evolved did the teams of horses used for comparison get longer and longer? We know that the Milford Proving Grounds does not have a corral with hundreds of horses that the engineers are harnessing to measure 455 horsepower!

James Watt was a renowned Scottish inventor, mechanical engineer and chemist who had six patents; several for steam engines, a machine that copied letters and an improved method of constructing furnaces. Watt as a unit of power was named after him and eventually incorporated into the International System of Units.

In 1776, Watt invented a new and improved steam engine. All he needed was a way to convince the farmers and mine operators that his steam engine could do the work of multiple horses. Watt studied the ponies at a coal mine and observed that the average animal could move 220 pounds of coal along a 100-foot mineshaft in one minute. He estimated that a horse could do 50% more work than a pony. Using a mathematical formula, he calculated that his steam engine could perform the same work as ten horses. Watt used the horsepower term to market his steam engine and it became the widely accepted unit of measure for engines and machinery.

Driving our Corvettes by Sandy Bechtel

All too often, people who drive sports cars are teased about having a midlife crisis. Not this girl! First of all, I'm 75 – way beyond midlife. Second of all, I've loved pretty cars since I was little. When I visited my grandparents in the summertime, we would sit on their front porch in the evenings and count cars: Chevys versus Fords. (Grandpa only drove Chevys.)

I absolutely love my Corvette – a 2011 Grand Sport Convertible. Not new, but nice! Double black, with red hash marks on the front fenders. When I drive home after our meetings, I usually have the top down and take my time. I don't think I've ever made the trip home without someone calling out compliments about my car. One evening, I actually had three different drivers and their passengers call out along the way. Last week, though, I had a unique admirer. I was stopped at a light, and a young man (probably in his late teens or early twenties) was stopped next to me. He said my car was really good looking. Then, he gave me a big smile and asked: "Will you be my grandma?" That certainly took me by surprise. We were both laughing, the light turned green, and away we went. What a fun, fun drive home!

Backpacks for Lansing Area Schoolchildren

Our club has always supported the Greater Lansing Area Food Bank, making a large donation every December. I belong to a church that runs one of the Food Bank's locations. We are currently collecting donations so that we can provide 50-100 filled backpacks for children of the people who depend on the Food Bank for food, clothing, and personal-care products.

The new backpacks will include: Paper, Pencils, Crayons, Markers, Scissors, Rulers, Erasers, Glue Sticks, Folders, Pens, Highlighters, and a Calculator. Each filled backpack costs approximately $25.00.

Our Club's Board voted to donate $100.00 to this cause – that makes four happy kids. If you would also personally consider making a $25.00 donation for this great cause, that would be wonderful. Here's how to do that:

1. Make your check payable to: Our Savior Lutheran Church
(Include your address, so a receipt can be mailed to you.)
2. Bring it to our August 3th General Membership Meeting, OR -
3. Mail it to: Sandy Bechtel, 6004 Strasbourg, Lansing, MI 48917
(All donations must be received at the church by August 7th.)

If you have any questions, please call me. Thank for your consideration.

2023 CORVETTE Z06 WILL BE A TIRE SLAYING MACHINE

© Muscle Cars and Trucks

Earlier this year we discovered at NCM bash that the 2023 Corvette Z06 was getting its own fully adjustable launch control set up. Now we know there is a little more to it. The Z06 will feature a new manual launch control system altogether. The ability to do burnouts just got way easier.

If you want a quick and easy way to do burnouts or a simple yet effective way to warm up your tires before sending your 2023 Z06 down the drag strip at seemingly unrivaled speed, check out page 203 of the users manual. Found by Corvette Blogger, this portion of the manual lays out what it takes to put your new ride in manual launch mode. For reference, here's what you do;

- Pull back on both paddle shifters (to declutch the vehicle)
- Release and pull the "+" or "-" paddle while keeping the other depressed
- If done successfully the Performance Transmission Active light will illuminate indicating you are ready to roll

Corvette vehicle chief engineer Josh Holder, the man responsible for the Z06 who has spoken numerous times about the Z06 and its performance capabilities, told Corvette Blogger that Manual mode is "smokey" fast. It's important to note, due to the high performance nature of the vehicle, manual mode is only intended for closed courses and not for public roads. Holder also told Corvette Blogger that the manual launch control mode was specifically developed to give the average person the ability to smoke the tires properly. The bespoke LT6 V8 engine construction makes it exceptionally difficult for the majority of drivers to "catch" the engine prior to hitting the rev limiter. This makes sense, the LT6 V8 engine puts out a whopping 670 naturally aspirated horsepower and has a redline of 8,600 RPM. It will be only a matter of time before we see the 2023 Corvette Z06, which enters production later this summer, break some speed records set forth by rivals such as the Dodge Demon.
