From Our President

Before I get too involved with things, I want to say hi to all of our members who are currently enjoying warmer climates. You are envied and missed. We hope you think of us just a little while you're working on your tans, or golf games, or happy hours by the pool. (Okay, that last one hurt to even type.) Here in Lansing, we have been visited by wintry weather. Not necessarily a lot of snow, but certainly plenty of bitter-cold temperatures. It's crazy! When your car needs washing the most, you have to think about frozen locks. Plus, you have to map out the cleanest/driest route home from the car wash. Otherwise, the only thing you accomplish is, well, nothing.

I'm someone who has a tendency to hunker down and stay indoors. Staying "indoors" is fine, as long as it doesn't mean never leaving the house. There are certainly a lot of great indoor activities. My favorites -- movies and live performances. It doesn't matter if it's karaoke, a high-school play, Wharton and Riverwalk Theatres, or a local oldies band, I love watching people perform. I come from a family of musicians, dancers, and singers. Our many get-togethers were magical to me as a child. They formed my love of the performing arts.

I am not a performer, but I was always in high school musicals. I even played Mrs. Paroo (grey hair and all) in "The Music Man". The funniest production I was ever in, though, was a talent show put on at my children's elementary school. (I don't mean to brag, but my daughter Julie was by far the most talented person in the show. She flawlessly played Beethoven's "Für Elise" on the piano. I think she was 10 years old at the time.) I was the main character of the show -- a mime who was sad. The different acts were there to cheer me up and change my frown into a smile. Acts were not limited to students. One group of parents was going to lip sync to "YMCA". Most of us organizers didn't know them, because their children were younger than ours. The night of the show came. Everything was going well as we sat in our makeshift "green room" waiting to go on. These parents, though, kept to themselves in another room back stage. It was finally their turn to go on. The music began, and the group started singing and dancing. That's when we realized our Village People were drunk. That's drunk, on stage, in a room full of young children and their parents. It's not like they were falling down, or anything. But, they were definitely way beyond feeling pain. We all froze and held our collective breath. When the music stopped, they took a bow, walked off stage, and quickly disappeared. The show finished without a hitch, and with a big smile on my happy face.

On that note, I'll say so long for now. Remember to save the wave.

News for Members

Editor's Notes:

The 2015 Z06 made the January 19th issue of Autoweek. They called it "the block's new bully". They commented that the new 1.7L Eaton supercharger spins up to 20,000RPM. Wow!

This 7 speed manual gearbox Vette did the quarter in 11.5 seconds at 123.8 MPH. I remember when breaking into the thirteen's with a street machine was top dog.

And if you like steel bodies for your other car, the 2015 Cadillac CTS-V has the same Z06 engine. Not quite as fast though, only 12.0 seconds in the quarter. It's a little paunchier at 4500 lbs curb weight.

Drive safely .. Editor

Corvette logos

The corvette emblem has changed over the years with each new generation. Some generations had several iterations. The original 1953 emblem had a US flag, but was replaced before introduction with the red bow tie flag you see here (GM exec decision).

I attempted to make these images as accurate as possible – there may be discrepancies – only as correct as I could find on the internet. Here's pics of each;
